

Today I broke a chair
It wasn't new; it was a tired old wooden chair
I inherited it with the living space I now occupy
I wasn't an accident, it was my rage
I thought it was worthless, but now it is gone I miss it
Once again my anger has cost me something I cared for